This small painted brick rowhouse is three stories high, three bays wide on the second and third floors and is accented by sills, a decorative belt course, and rectangular lintels. The first floor shop, with a recessed entrance to the left and a large flat bipartite display window is faced with metal siding. Symmetrical fenestration, proportionally scaled on the second and third floors, punctuates the facade. The rectangular windows are double hung with six over six lights. A central roof dormer crowns the sloping roof.
